

in yo FACE!

INYO FACE is a five-member band from Dalton, Georgia, who will get “in your face,” if needed, to make sure you have fun and like their brand of country southern rock. They will get your attention, and with a name like INYO FACE, you better be very good.

And what makes this band very good? Here’s your answer:

Each band member was influenced by a different type of music from big band, jazz, blues, western swing, country, southern rock, bluegrass to classical. These influences past along from one member to another are combined into a unique musical style. Most of the lead vocals are done by Don Bradley, with background vocals executed in three and four part harmonies by the other band members. Combined with a strong lead vocal, “INYO harmonies,” outstanding musicianship, and their unique musical style, the group keeps their fans coming back and bringing with them new converts to their music.

You will not be bored at their personal appearances. “You will see raw energy, crazy-assed country boys who love entertaining,” says Don Bradley. A good example of this energy laced with spontaneity and humor is Sam Crowe. Sam is the utility musician and the zaniest member of the group, who wrote a song called “Laughing Man” that has only one verse. He sings that one verse and then just laughs hysterically throughout the rest of the song. The laughter from Sam is contagious, and the audience joins in – a definite crowd-pleaser. Sam is also a serious songwriter with two cuts on the Kentucky Headhunters double platinum debut album, “Picking On Nashville.”

Most of their original material they just recently recorded with Nashville engineer/producer, George Clinton, is very well received at their club dates where bands tend to be classified as human jukeboxes. The original material put into a commercial groove by the band puts them on target with their young audience. The tightness of their groove comes from cousins Randy Stennett (lead guitar) and Steve Ledford (bass) who have been performing together for 22 years. The band with Mark Roach (drums) and Don Bradley (keyboards) has been together for almost four years. Sam Crowe (steel guitar) was added to the roster earlier this year. Every band member says, “Sam was the cohesive force that brought all the pieces together to give us the sound we’ve been searching.”

What is this sound: Who is this band? What makes them different from the rest of the pack? The only proper way to answer these questions is to let them get INYO FACE.
